

LEVY READY?

Apprenticeships: The Next Generation

Impact

Impact have a strong history of working with apprentices and with the introduction of the apprenticeship levy we have been helping clients make the most of this exciting opportunity. We are passionate about creating organisations worth working for and the apprentice levy is a great opportunity to improve the quality of education for employees at every level and from every background.

Liberate brilliance

We believe that development shouldn't just be about skills, qualifications or experience; the capacity to use these things effectively to create value and execute strategy is just as (if not more) important. When we are designing your apprenticeship programmes, we think about how the learning will confront unexamined mindsets, challenge personal assumptions (about ourselves, about the organisation, about the world) and build the capability to take effective action in service to personal, professional, organisational and societal goals.

See the person, not the stereotype

In a global labour market, where cultural differences mix with a wide range of educational and intellectual traditions, we need to move on from stereotyping generational groups. Apprenticeships should no longer be seen as being for the young and low skilled and should instead help everybody to belong, to feel valued, to be challenged and to grow.
